GIBSON'S METHODS.

Interesting Correspondence on the

In fview of the fact that A. M. Gibson assumed to be a special assistant attorney-general of the United States, Mr. Mulliken, the chief clerk of the Department of Jus-tice, yesterday addressed Mr. Gibson the fol-lowing letter:

lowing letter:

DEPARTNENT OF JUSTICE, Nov. 25, 1881.

A. M. Gibson, esq., Washington, D. C.:

Six: Some one left upon my table yesterday a printed slip purporting to be a report in your name addressed to the "Attorney tieneral." The slip was not under any address to this office but had upon it the address to fis office but had upon it the address of a newspaper. I do not know for what purpose this slip was left or by whom. There is no signature by which to identify it. The tille. "Special Assistant. Attorney for the United States." is appended to the signature, but there is nothing in the records of this Department to authorize that. A note of Attorney General MacVeagh of the 22d ultimo, which I find upon record, appoints you "to assist in the investigation and prosecution of the Star-route cases." but nothing in that or is the communication of Detective Woodward, to which it is areply, refers to your being an assistant attorney for the United States. If you have received any other communication, having the effect supposed by you, I will be obliged if you will communicate it to me in order that it may be recorded. I make these remarks upon the signature, supposing that it may be that you have authorized the printing and perhaps the transmission. Be so good as to give early attention to this matter.

Very respectfully.

In reply Mr. Gibson last night forwarded. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, NOV. 25, 1881.

SAMULH MULLINEN,
Chief Clierk.

In reply Mr. Gibson last night forwarded to Solicitor-General Phillips a communication of some six or seven foolscap pages, in which he gave his side of the case. This letter Mr. Gibson declined to give out, letting its publication rest, if made, with Mr. Phillips. He informed a reporter, however, that he had intimated in his letter it might be well for him to make it public. Mr. Gibson also declined to say anything upon the subject of the criticism which had been made upon him.

Solicitor-General Phillips did not receive Gibson's letter in response to Chief Clerk Mulliken's letter until noon to-day, and as he had not had time to digest its contents, absolutely refused to give it out, at any absolutely refused to give it out, at any rate today, for publication.

He denies, however, that the letter contains anything like a request that its con-tents be made public. Judge Phillips makes no effort to conceal his objection to the methods employed by Gibson in giving offimethods employed by crossed in giving one-cial papers to the press, and says he thinks that gentleman has exhibited undue haste in rushing into print.

It was developed at the Department of Justice to-day that Mr. Mulliken's letter to Gibson was given to the press by the last named individual, contrary to all rules of official propriety. Gibson's action in this matter is severely commented upon at the

GUITEAU'S TRIAL.

FURTHER TESTIMONY FOR DE-FENSE.

Habits and Peculiarities of Guiteau and His Family-Guiteau's Opinion of Beecher-Testimony of Senator Logan, Ars. Scoville and Others.

Logani. Mrs. Scoville and others.

The jury in Guitenu's case took a long walk in the northwestern section of the city this morning, and came into court with checks aglow, as a result of their healthy exercise. Mrs. Scoville wore a new black velvet circular, heavily beaded, to-day. The court-room was packed, and the demand for admission larger than usual.

Guiteau's ride up from jail was without incident, except that he complained of

The Proceedings Opened. Mr. Scoville opened the proceedings by reading a telegram from Emory A. Storrs, who said that it would be impossible for him to leave Chicago for Washington until after next Wednesday. Under the circumstances Mr. Scoville said he would not press his application for an attachment for that witness

Thomas W. North took the stand again Anomas W. North took the stand again and his cross-examination was resumed; Witness reiterated a statement made yes-terday about a row between Luther W. Guiteau and the prisoner one night at their boarding-house in 1850; witness said The Prisoner Struck His Father in that statement."

Witness was a member of the Methodist Church from 1847 to 1858; left because of a change in his religious views relating particularly to heliness; he withdrew on his own account; requested to be relieved from the conference and ministry at the same time; there were no charges against him;
was in Galveston, Tex., from 1861 to 1865;
afterward resided for a time in Pennsylvania; took up the practice of law twelve in that statement.' afterward resided for a time in Pennsylvania; took up the practice of law twelve years ago; witness and his wife joined the Episcopalian Church in Freeport, III., in 1809; was solicited to return to the Methodist pulpit, and did preach once or twice, but there was a political difference between himself and the congregation, they being simself and the congregation, they being Republicans, and he retired.

The Religious Circles in Freeport The Religious Circles in Freeport of which he was a member, the witness said he did not remember that Judge Amerling was a member. The witness related a circumstance at one of the meetings of the circle, when young Anthony Sweat's objection to joining the Oneida Community angered his old mother and father; they did not know how to deal with him for his conduct: Luther W. Guiteau advised them to Take a Knife and Slay the Youth like Abraham slew Isaac; witness assumed that Mr. Guiteau regarded himself at that that Mr. Guiteau regarded himself at that time as acting under an inspiration; he as-suredly appeared sincere; never knew him to wrong any one; never knew him to violate the law of the land in any manner. The witness was then questioned closely with reference to a trip of himself and Luther W. Guiteau to the Cave of the Winds at Niagara Falls. The witness stated yester-day that Mr. Guiteau on that occasion seemed.

Paralyzed with Awe. Paralyzed with Awe, and became so helpless that the witness and the guide had to carry him to the hotel. He said that the strangest part of it all was that never afterward did Mr. Guiteau refer to the event; he seemed, indeed, to have no recollection of it whatever; the witness did not consider the seene such as would appail any ordinary person with fear or horror; certainly the sublimity of the scene did not strike him that way; after returning from strike him that way; after returning from the Falls they took a bath and dinner and played several games of Ten Pins in the Basement of the Church.

[Laughter,] Thought such exercise and recreation necessary to brace them up; had talked with Mr. Scoville about this case, but never referred to the Niagara Falls incident; had communicated with Mr. Scoville before the trial by letter.

The witness at great length reiterated Luther W. Guiteau's faith in his ability to banish disease by prayer; he seemed more sincere and carnest on such occasions than ordinary people; he was frenzied, nervous and excitable as it were; he did not always pray, but sometimes commanded a disease to disappear. The attention of the witness was again called to the proceedings of the "Circle." He said they used to read various publications published by the Oncida Community; The Circular, a paper, was one and The Dreams, a book, was another; some members were in sympathy other; some members were in sympathy with the Community and others were not; Mr. Luther Guiteau was a more advanced believer in their doctrine than the witness; witness believed in inspiration by the Holy Chost; Mr. Guiteau believed in earthly im-mortality; that there were certain men and women in such Close Communication With Christ that they would not die; witness looked forward to a time when men and women, forward to a time when men and women, with the aid of that doctrine, would become immortal; that it would bring about some great physical change at some time; the Oneida Community considered themselves the agents for bringing these great results about. Witness was reluctant to admit that such was his exact belief. He answered somewhat evasively.

Being pressed closely, the witness said that he was Armenian in his belief, while the belief of the community was Calvins.

the belief of the community was Calvins-tie; in other words, witness believed in Communism; witness, while a resident of Texas, was in the wool and hide business; then in general mercantile business; went South to engage in such business. has been doing some cranky work in this case. I used to attend his church. If you knew him as well as I do, you wouldn't pay any attention to what he says. A great many people think he is cranky, socially. I have no doubt Mrs. Tilton told the truth about him. That's all right. Enough for Beecher." [Loud laughter.]

Senator Logan on the Stand. United States Senator Logan then took e witness stand Mr. Scoville-"Did you ever see the pris oner before?"
Ouritosu—"How are you, Senator? I am gidd to know you?" [Laughter.]

The witness then proceeded to testify as follows: I first saw the prisoner in my rooms at 512 Twelfth street; he same there exerciso. Mrs. Sooville wore a new black velvet circular, heavily beaded, to-day. The court-room was packed, and the demand for admission larger than usual.

Guiteau's ride up from jail was without incident, except that he complained of being cold. There were no people of note among the spectators in court during the early part of the session, but a number came in as the hours wore on.

There was a marked attendance of female school teachers, which originated the term which was started very shortly after they began to arrive. The scramble for good seats was conducted with the usual cagerness, and rather indignant glances were cast at the row of inverted chairs which are held in daily reserve for Mrs. Blaine, Mrs. Corkhill and their respective parties who have become almost daily attendants.

Counsel for both sides arrived on the scene early. Judge Cox was a little bit tardy, but did not look as though he apprehenced the threatened lynching promised by a Minnesota correspondent.

Guiteau was Brought in at 10:10 o'clock. He was wrapped in a new overcoat, and wore a smile of resignation. On senting himself he shook hands with and had a hurried, whispered conversation with Mrs. Scoville.

The Proceedings Opened.

Witness—"I cannot remember."
Mr. Scoville—"Did you ever notice any of his peculiarities?"
Witness—"He was nervous, excitable and gesticulated wildly when talking; sometimes he was morose, and at other times cheerful."
"Did you ever observe any absence of mind on his part in connection with his work?"
"He was not always accurate. He often got his work mixed up."
Cross-examined: Witness lived with his father and worked by the day for the Community; was not a member of the Community; Guiteau came to witness once and said he wanted to leave, to steal away; he applied to witness to assist him to away; he applied to witness to assist him to escape; it was not absolutely necessary for Guiteau to leave in a surreptitious manner, but Guiteau close that method to avoid Guiteau (disgustediy)—"Ints man was not in a position to know. He was only a clerk." [Laughter.]

Cross-examined: Witness had charge of distributing all the documents, and, he added, with a smile, "we paid honest postage all along." [Laughter.]

John W. Turner was read next by Mr. Scoville, in order to strengthen the claim of insanity among the prisoner's ancestors. Experience of an Office-seeker.

Moss replied that no subperna had been served on him.

Moss—"Yes, sir, and I am the man sum-

Moss—"Yes, sir, and I am the man sum-moned."

Mr. Davidge—"There should be no difficulty over this matter; this may be another case of inspiration." [Laughter.]

The District Attorney thought the summoning of a witness in this manner was an unusual proceeding, and that the Government should be furnished in advance with a list of witnesses for the defense. Mr. Scoville Rather Sharply Replied that there was no law which would compel him to furnish such a list, and he did not intend to make such provision.

The Court recognized Mr. Scoville's rights in this respect and the witness was then sworn.

Witness resided in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, last March, April and May, particularly the latter month; saw the prisoner a number of times at the Executive Mansion; was attracted especially by his peculiar conduct; witness thought that the prisoner was crazy; his only reason for such an impression was because the prisoner Looked Like Crazy People Look. Cross-examined: Was admitted to this bar in April, 1873; was practicing all that he could get to do; he was also a magistrate; could not say how often he had met the prisoner, some afteen or twenty times; he was not employed officially at the Executive Mansion; was there looking after office.

"I got in once," the witness added.
"After fifteen or twenty trials?"
"Yes, sir."
He did not know what the other people thought of Guiteau. The witness did not go to the Mansion every time to see the President, but most of the time to see the private secretary, who sympathized with him, and he believed that it would have turned out all right if the President had lived; he never spoke to the prisoner or heard him utter a word or see him speak to any one.
